GLENDALE LIBRARIES HAVE SPACES AVAILABLE FOR YOUR GATHERING, MEETING OR CONCERT

Glendale, Ariz. — Have a party, business seminar, outdoor concert or small wedding at a Glendale Public Library. Two of the Glendale libraries are opening their doors to rental opportunities for the public.

The Glendale Main Library at 5959 W. Brown St. offers both indoor and outdoor spaces for rent. The indoor opportunities include a small and large meeting room and an auditorium complete with a stage and fixed, tiered seating. The entire meeting room wing, which includes access to the restrooms and southeast portion of the lobby, may also be rented. The outdoor opportunities include a small xeriscape garden on the library's south side and the front lawn with the award-winning garden north of the building.

The Foothills Branch Library at 19055 N. 57th Ave. offers indoor spaces with a variety of options including both classroom-style setups and a large, multi-purpose room. The spaces are made up of the Hummingbird Room and the larger Roadrunner Room, which can be divided into two rooms, the Eagle Room and the Quail Room. The Roadrunner Room includes a carpeted stage, which is in the Quail Room when divided. The stage makes the room well suited for lectures, services or performances. An additional option is to reserve the entire meeting room wing that includes all the rooms plus a kitchenette and lobby area with access to the restrooms.

Rental prices and capacities vary depending on the space and reservation type. A two-hour minimum rental is required for all rooms and a refundable cleaning deposit may also be required. A surcharge of $25 per hour will be applied to rooms rented before or after library hours of operation and on weekends. This fee increases to $50 for rental of the meeting room wing at the Main Library.
